“ My sister Delphine was one of the "beacons" that helped me determine my future ambitions. Her decision to become a teacher was a huge reason why I chose teaching as my career choice. For that I am eternally grateful. She was my guiding light in making that decision.

I wish I could have spent more time in person with her and the rest of my family, but I will always cherish the times we spent together. I especially remember the holidays we spent together as a family -- it was always a special time --- laughing, talking, celebrating with food and drinks and going to Lion's football games on Thanksgiving or a Michigan game at the Big House in the Fall.

She was a devoted wife, a wonderful mother, a great sister and a proud grandmother. She was ALWAYS willing to help those in need and was always there for me and others. She loved her children's accomplishments and was especially proud of her three wonderful grandchildren. I will never forget the joy in her voice when she told me about the successful surgery Christina had recently. We both shed tears of joy during that conversation

She missed her husband John after his sudden death. He was the one person she could always immediately rely on. His death had a great impact on her life and she was really never the same emotionally following his death. But she did persevere and it was her love of her family that helped her through the difficult times.

I will always be grateful for the memories I have from our childhood. Like the time she had to climb through the milk chute in order to get in our house when we were locked out. Or the time I let a squirrel into the house and it knocked down our Christmas tree and we both tried to restore it to an acceptable state before our parents came home.it did not work!!

But that is what life is all about, memories, both good and bad and life decisions that charter your course through time.I will miss you bunches my dear sister. Rest In Peace snd say hi John and Chris and Margie.
